

JRM 2018: 10th Junior Researcher Meeting in Applied Linguistics

10.-11. September 2018 University of Duisburg-Essen, Campus Essen

Research(ing) Cultures in Applied Linguistics

At the JRM in Essen junior researchers share their research ideas, their approaches as well as their (first) research results in the field of Applied Linguistics. Thus, the JRM provides a stage for those who are in the early phase of their research (Masters or PhD) as well as for those who have already completed their projects. Presenters can choose between different formats, i.e. shorter Lightning Papers as well as longer talks, e.g. in the following areas:

- 1) Language Varieties
- 2) Researching Cultures of Teaching and Learning
- 3) CLIL, Inter- and Transcultural Aspects etc.
- 4) Cultures of Research: Focus on Methods
- 5) Language Use in the Media
- 6) The Language of Sub-Cultures & Language Change
- 7) Regional and Minority Languages Teaching
- 8) Transcultural Communication
- 9) Language Politics & Policies
- 10) Multilingualism

Call for Papers

Deadline: tba

Call for Lightning Papers: Lightning Papers are a short form of presentations of approximately 10-15 minutes. They are ideal for presenting your general research ideas as well as specific questions that you might have in the current stage of your research.

Call for Talks: In the slots with longer parallel talks presenters will be given the chance to present their projects and approaches in more detail. These slots are ideal for (nearly) finished individual projects or for presenting the (first) results of joint projects.
